ADVOCACY IN ACTION

Founded by Sayer Ji, Dr. Edward Group, and Marla Maples, the Global Wellness Forum emerged from a shared understanding that fragmented efforts are no match for the scale and sophistication of today’s disinformation landscape. The co-founders recognized the urgent need to unite principled, informed voices — to share rigorous research, elevate public understanding, and collectively amplify truth in the face of powerful forces working to obscure it.

GWF was created to harness the power of collective expertise, integrating research, legal analysis, and policy engagement into a focused, strategic platform. Its purpose is clear: to bring truth, health, and freedom into the public sphere — and to ensure transparency guides the decisions that shape our lives.

The Forum stands on a simple but powerful belief: when principled leaders act in coordination, truth gains strength, reform gains momentum, and lasting change becomes possible.

Dear Friend,

This year, the Global Wellness Forum has stood shoulder-to-shoulder with advocates, researchers, scientists, attorneys and policymakers to create the kind of change many once believed impossible. What began as a bold manifesto at our launch —calling for truth, transparency, and sovereignty in public health and environmental policy—has rapidly evolved into a powerful, coordinated movement. Together with our expert councils, strategic partners, and a rapidly growing national coalition, we transformed grassroots voices into policy influence, public awareness, and legislative victories.

We were founded on a shared vision: a world where public policy serves the people, not profit; where science is guided by ethics and integrity rather than industry influence; and where every individual can live in sovereignty, health, and harmony with nature. That vision has been our compass as we built an organization capable of elevating truth-tellers, supporting whistleblowers, commissioning research, mobilizing citizens, and engaging lawmakers at every level of government.

In just our first year, GWF built a robust expert council network of more than ten councils and over fifty distinguished leaders spanning science, medicine, law, and ethics. We helped advance landmark state-level reforms—from Florida’s historic bill to criminalize geoengineering and weather modification, to fluoride removal efforts, to the growing national movement for psychological rights. We launched major public-education initiatives, released influential white papers, conducted environmental weather analyses, and held briefings with state legislators and federal policymakers. And through media engagement, interviews, and national platforms, we brought critical visibility to issues long kept in the shadows.

Our partnerships have deepened across more than twenty aligned organizations, allowing us to coordinate research, advocacy, content-sharing, and coalition work in service of a shared mission. By coordinating closely with aligned organizations, we not only expand the impact of shared initiatives but also help set the direction for national conversations. GWF’s leadership in messaging and mobilization has become a catalyst for the broader movement’s momentum.

GWF now serves as a trusted expert resource for key national health leaders, offering substantive white papers, scientific research, and investigative reports to support the administration’s efforts to restore integrity, transparency, and evidence-based decision-making. We have briefed senior officials, contributed to policy evaluations, and advanced aligned initiatives such as Make America Healthy Again. In parallel, we strengthened a multi-organization coalition dedicated to protecting psychological rights and contributed to international conversations—including the launch of Make Europe Healthy Again in Brussels and Codex food-integrity discussions abroad earlier this year in North Korea. These contributions underscore GWF’s role as both a national thought leader and an emerging presence in global wellness governance.

As we look ahead, our mission remains clear: to unite truth-tellers, support scientific integrity, empower citizens, and hold leaders accountable. We will continue expanding our expert research, strengthening our existing councils, coordinating national coalitions, and advancing policy reform to create a new standard for wellness—one rooted in transparency, dignity, and respect for all life. The momentum we have built is only the beginning.

We invite you to join us not as observers, but as participants—because the future we seek is not inherited; it is built by the choices we make and the actions we take today.

With gratitude, unity, and determination,

Sayer Ji, Co-Founder & Chairman
Dr. Edward Group III, Co-Founder
